Excerpt: . . . whose chief object is the advancement of the knowledge and practice of engineering and the application of allied sciences and who are not organized for commercial purposes. This conference is thoroughly representative. There are in attendance delegates representing over 60 per cent of the organizations invited. These delegates, over 70 per cent of those who could attend under the conditions of the call, represent organizations having an aggregated membership of over 100, 000, or 83 per cent of the membership of all the organizations and societies invited. This splendid response from the engineering and allied technical organizations of this country to the invitation to attend this conference, to consider the desirability of welding the engineers of this country, through their respective societies or organizations, into a comprehensive body for united action in non-technical or welfare work, is evidence that there is a general desire on the part of the engineers and allied technologists in this direction. It is believed that this is the first attempt that has been made to hold a conference for the purpose of discussing the possibilities of such an organization; I think you will agree with me on the evidence of this representative attendance the organizations represented look with favor on the fundamental principles involved. s On behalf of the Joint Conference Committee and of the societies which it represents I desire to thank you and through you the societies and organizations that you represent for your co-operation in making...
