

The Economics of Renewable Electricity Market Integration: An Empirical and Model-Based Analysis of Regulatory Frameworks and Their Impacts on the Power Market

By Marco Nicolosi

Deutscher Industrieverlag. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, The Economics of Renewable Electricity Market Integration: An Empirical and Model-Based Analysis of Regulatory Frameworks and Their Impacts on the Power Market, Marco Nicolosi, The rapidly growing supply-based renewable energy (EE) in the electricity market increased the complexity of the electricity system and the requirements of the electricity market modeling. This work describes on the basis of empirical examples from Germany and Texas, that increasing EE share strongly influenced the operation of the market. The resulting price signals lead in the long term system adjustments. To obtain an estimate of the effects of adjustment, the current market model was 'the high temporal resolution of electricity market analysis model' (THEA) developed. In a first application, the ERCOT market area in Texas is modeled to the specific properties of the model to test and compare with complexity-reducing methods with regard to the temporal resolution and the operational detail sharpness. In both cases, the results show significant differences compared to the results of the full use of the model. The ERCOT application also shows that the EE-induced adaptation effects in an isolated, mainly thermal power market are very clear. In summary, it can be seen...

READ ONLINE

Reviews

A top quality publication along with the font used was intriguing to read. I really could comprehend everything using this written e ebook. Its been designed in an remarkably straightforward way and it is only after i finished reading through this publication by which basically altered me, modify the way i believe.

-- Cathrine Larkin Sr.

Very useful to all of group of people. I actually have read through and so i am certain that i will planning to study yet again once again down the road. I am just very easily can get a satisfaction of looking at a created book.

-- Mark Bernier