It is a curious fact that this classification seems to have given rise to another distinction, which is not at all justified by the nature of things. There are certain properties of curves, surfaces, etc., which may be deduced for the most general configurations of their kind, depending only upon the knowledge that certain conditions of continuity are fulfilled in the vicinity of a certain point. These are the so-called infinitesimal properties and are naturally treated by the methods of the differential calculus. The curious fact to which we have referred is that, but for rare exceptions, these infinitesimal properties have been dealt with only from the metrical point of view. Projective geometry, which has made such progress in the course of the century, has apparently disdained to consider the infinitely small parts into which its configurations may be decomposed. It has gained the possibility of making assertions about its configurations as a whole, only by limiting its field to the consideration of algebraic cases, a restriction which is unnecessary in differential geometry. Between the metrical differential geometry of Monge and Gauss, and the algebraic projective geometry of Poncelet and Plucker, there is left, therefore, the field of projective differential geometry whose nature partakes somewhat of both. The theorems of this kind of geometry are concerned with projective properties of the infinitesimal elements. As in the ordinary differential geometry, the process of integration may lead to statements concerning properties of the configuration as a whole. But,...
