Do not suppose that this is a mere matter of taste, all easy enough if facility in copying could be secured. It is well to be anxious about your ability to copy or reproduce the object before you, and you cannot be too faithful in doing this, provided you do it in the right way. But you are not required to search out and scrutinise that which you are to paint; you must take in the general character, what is seen at a reasonable distance. That should impress you so that you will reproduce it as surely as the camera would; and you have the advantage over the camera, in that you are able to use colour as well as light and shade. It is...
